SITUATION:

A trough of low pressure remains over the southern parts of Fiji. It is expected to gradually drift north and lie over the northern parts of the country by Wednesday. A moist north-westerly wind prevails over the group and will become east to northeast by later Wednesday. The trough of low pressure will propagate again to the west over the group and move away from the country by Saturday (09/01/20). An easterly wind flow will prevail once the trough of low pressure has moved away from the Fiji group until the forecast period.
